

Practical
ACTION

A gift in your Will to pass on the POWER OF POSSIBILITY

WELCOME

Thank you so much for considering making a gift in your Will to Practical Action.

Our transformative work simply wouldn't be possible without the generosity of people like you. Gifts in Wills provide dependable long-term income, so we can work with communities long into the future with the confidence that we can see things through.

Because life-changing transformation takes time. It can take many years to build a relationship with a community, to understand the problems they face, and to work together to find ingenious solutions. Those solutions involve building trust, establishing partnerships, building capacity in the community, and supporting people to access the resources they need.

To make a charity part of your legacy is a wonderful tribute to the beliefs you have in common and your shared vision.

For many of us, it's also the biggest single donation we ever make, which makes it an extremely significant decision. If you choose to entrust a gift in your Will to us, we promise we will use it to achieve positive and long-term change around the world.

It's an extraordinary act of kindness to leave behind something to benefit people you have never met, but whose need you have understood and felt. Through a gift in your Will, your kindness will endure.

Thank you again.
With warmest regards,

With new knowledge and training, farmers can grow crops in a way that values both people and the environment.

“We started this enterprise to build our own houses. We will continue making bricks since demand is on the rise.”

Yankee is part of a group of women in Nepal using their training from Practical Action to form an innovative business: making earth bricks to help their community build affordable, earthquake-resilient homes.

Pass on the POWER OF POSSIBILITY

Creating lasting change in the world's poorest countries takes time, commitment and vision. It needs a team approach. Communities must be at the heart of coming up with the solutions. Practical Action brings people together, finding ingenious solutions and using them to transform lives, all over the world. We share what works with others so solutions that start small can grow big.

Small farms, bright futures

The changing climate is making farming incredibly difficult for rural communities around the world. A gift in your Will could help us work with farmers to find innovative ways to beat flooding and droughts, grow enough crops to feed their families and earn an income.

Lighting up villages, electrifying nations

One billion people don't have access to electricity. Your legacy could help us find clean, safe energy solutions for people living in poverty, powering schools, healthcare centres and businesses, and transforming lives.

Health and dignity in the slums

Millions of people live in urban slums where disease is rife. They have no safe water for drinking and washing, and no proper refuse and sewage services. Through the power of your Will, you could help make cities in developing countries cleaner, healthier and fairer places for people to live and work.

From vulnerability to resilience

Severe droughts, storms and flooding are becoming more common, putting the lives of the world's poorest communities in danger. You can help us work with communities to adapt the way they live and work, so they are more prepared for climate-related disasters.

Please consider leaving a gift in your Will, so this life-changing work can continue for generations to come.

Why I made a LEGACY GIFT

“I believe a legacy should reflect something about our lives, from the people we have cherished, to the interests we have pursued and the experiences we have valued during our lifetime. That’s why I have chosen to include Practical Action in my Will.”

Clive Quick, Retired Consultant General, Vascular Surgeon, and Practical Action supporter

“I know the incredible difference Practical Action’s work makes to other families around the world. To be able to give people dignity and hope is a precious legacy and to know that people will keep leading better lives because of gifts we give, is something that is important to me.”

Lesley McIntosh, Finance and Audit Consultant, and Practical Action supporter

“Because of solar power we use drip irrigation technology to water vegetables. My family and I have moved from starving to being able to eat all kinds of food.”

A unique combination of technology and training means farming communities in Zimbabwe, like Alfred’s, are beating the ongoing drought and growing abundant crops. It’s a practical solution to end hunger and poverty.

“With support from Practical Action, we are cultivating vegetables over the cage. Hopefully we will get 10–12 squash every harvest. The frame will float no matter the rise of water, so we can still harvest during rainy season.” Suborna Sarkar

We worked with Suborna’s community in Bangladesh to develop an innovative way to grow food, despite the regular monsoon floods. Floating farms combine vegetable growing and fish farming to provide a year-round solution to hunger.

YOUR WILL-MAKING GUIDE

Everything you need to know about making or amending your Will, and how to leave a gift to Practical Action.

Everyone should have a Will

Your Will is a powerful document. It allows you to decide what happens to your savings, property and possessions when you die.

Making a Will is the best way to look after your loved ones when you are gone. It’s also an opportunity to remember the good causes you’ve supported in your lifetime – your legacy to the world.

Life is busy, which is why many of us put off making a Will. We think we’ve got plenty of time and that we’ll get around to it eventually. The truth is, we never know what the future holds, and it’s really important that every adult has a Will, no matter their age or how much they own.

A Will is a living document that you can amend as often as you wish. It’s really important to review your Will every few years at least – circumstances change and can affect the arrangements you’ve made.

Having an up-to-date Will is the only way to ensure that everything you leave behind will go where you want it to go.

How to make your Will

Making a Will is much easier than you might think. Once it is done, you'll feel great peace of mind, knowing that your wishes will be carried out.

1. Get expert advice

Many people work with a solicitor to create their Will, but there are other options. Citizen's Advice has a clear and impartial guide: citizensadvice.org.uk/family/death-and-wills

2. Work out what you have

At the back of this booklet, you'll find a helpful Will-making worksheet. It includes a list of things to consider when you are working out the value of your estate.

3. Decide who gets what

Think about what you would like to leave to the people and good causes you care about. There are three types of gifts to consider. You'll find them explained on page 13.

4. Choose someone to carry out your wishes

You'll need to ask someone to take responsibility for your Will and ensure your instructions are followed. This is your 'executor'. It can be a trusted friend or relative – even if they benefit from your Will. You can also appoint a professional executor, such as a bank, solicitor or accountant.

5. Make your Will

The process is simpler, quicker and less expensive than many people think. Working with a solicitor often gives people extra confidence that everything has been handled correctly. Remember that your Will doesn't need to be final – amending an existing Will is generally a straightforward process.

6. Put your Will in safe hands

Your Will is important, so store it somewhere safe – with a bank or solicitor. Keep a copy for yourself and tell your executor where to find it.

“Although the climate is changing here, the new ways of farming we are learning are allowing me to continue to sow and harvest. I am optimistic for the future.”

Al Hafiz lives with his family in the village of Magdoub, Sudan, where drought is a big problem. We worked with his community to rebuild the local dam and install irrigation canals, making the land fertile once more.

“Our work used to be very hazardous. Now we have received training that helped minimise the risks. And we use machines to carry the waste.”

We’re working with waste workers like Yasin and the government of Bangladesh to make the slums safer, cleaner places to live and work. Together, we’re putting a stop to people having to empty sewage pits with buckets and their bare hands.

How to amend an existing Will

If you already have a Will, it’s simple to change or add something. You use a ‘codicil’ form. A codicil takes just a couple of minutes to complete. You need to get the form witnessed by two people, and then store it safely with your Will.

If you’d like to add a gift in your existing Will to Practical Action, you’ll find a codicil at the back of this booklet.

Types of gift

There are three kinds of gift you can make in your Will:

A residuary gift is the remainder (or percentage) of your estate once any specific gifts, taxes, legal expenses and liabilities have been paid out.

A pecuniary gift is a specific sum of money (remember that inflation may decrease the value of this money over time).

A specific gift would be something like jewellery, antiques or shares.

If you decide to leave a gift to Practical Action in your Will, you can use this wording:

For a residuary gift

I give devise bequeath and appoint to Practical Action (registered charity no 247257) of The Robbins Building, 25 Albert Street, Rugby, Warwickshire CV21 2SD _____% of the residue of my estate and I direct that the receipt of the Treasurer of the time being or other authorised officer will be sufficient discharge for my executors.

For a pecuniary gift

I give Practical Action (registered charity no 247257) of The Robbins Building, 25 Albert Street, Rugby, Warwickshire CV21 2SD the sum of £ _____ and I direct that the receipt of the Treasurer of the time being or other authorised officer will be sufficient discharge for my executors.

Life changes that impact your Will

- In England, getting married or divorced revokes your Will.
- Unmarried cohabiting couples have no automatic right of inheritance if their partner dies without a Will.
- If you die without a Will, your spouse won't automatically get everything.
- Your child won't automatically be under the care of their surviving parent if you die without a Will.
- Step-children are not recognised under law, and so won't automatically inherit if you die without a Will.

This is why it is vital to have a Will, to consult a solicitor when you make or amend it, and to keep it up to date. It's the only way to ensure that your savings, property and possessions go to the people and causes you care most about.

What is Inheritance Tax?

Inheritance Tax is the amount of your estate which must be paid to the Government. Inheritance Tax is 40%, and it is payable on the portion of your estate above a certain threshold. You can check the current threshold at www.hmrc.gov.uk/inheritance-tax

If you leave 10% or more of your estate to charity, you qualify for a reduced rate of Inheritance Tax of 36%.

“I've helped 44 households improve their health through good hygiene. They've changed dramatically.”

We worked with Mama Safi's community in Kenya, building a clean, dependable water supply through solar-powered pumps. Mama Safi now shares life-saving hygiene advice with her community about how to use their water to stop disease and improve health.

Legal terms explained

Beneficiary (or legatee): anyone you leave a gift to in your Will. Anyone entitled to the benefit of property held on trust.

Codicil: a document which allows you to add or alter the terms of an existing Will.

Crown (or Treasury): the tax authorities.

Executor: the person or institution you appoint in a Will to administer your estate and carry out your instructions.

Intestate: having died without leaving a valid Will.

Letters of Administration: authority to administer your estate, granted by the Probate Registry, where there is a Will but no named executor.

Pecuniary gift: a gift of a specific amount of money.

Probate: binding confirmation that your estate will be administered by one or more of the executors named in your Will.

Residuary gift: a gift of all or a percentage of what's left of your estate once all specific gifts, legal expenses and liabilities have been taken out.

Testator/testatrix: the person making the Will.

Trustee: an executor looking after any part of your estate left in trust.

Will laws across the UK

The law in England, Northern

Ireland and Wales

- You must normally be 18 to make your Will.
- Marriage and divorce invalidate an existing Will.
- A spouse and children cannot automatically challenge an existing Will (important after remarriage or when more children are born).
- You must sign the Will in the presence of two or more witnesses present at the same time.

The law in Scotland

- The minimum age for making your Will is 12.
- Marriage and divorce do not automatically revoke an existing Will.
- Your spouse and children have a greater right to challenge your Will.
- If you write your Will by hand (a holographic Will), you do not need witnesses but you must sign the bottom of each page.

OUR PROMISE TO YOU

A gift in your Will to Practical Action is a promise of a world that works better for everyone. It is a promise that together we will support communities to develop ingenious solutions to their biggest problems.

We understand that when you leave a gift to us you are making a special commitment. Here is our promise to you:

- Your loved ones come first – we respect and understand that.
- We are always here to answer any questions you may have honestly and quickly.
- We care and will handle your legacy gift with sensitivity.
- Every single gift will change lives – we will use your gift wisely and effectively.
- We are discreet and your privacy is important to us – any information you share with us will be treated in confidence.

Life-changing gift, LIFE-CHANGING DIFFERENCE

Doreen Polley was a lifelong supporter of Practical Action, who left a gift to us in her Will as a powerful way to create lasting, positive change for future generations.

Doreen's generosity means we'll be able to work with more communities to develop ingenious solutions, forge new partnerships and support more people with the skills and knowledge they need to succeed.

“Simon wanted to make the world a fairer place, so we are proud that two years after his death, he is still improving the lives of people living in poverty, thanks to the support he gave to Practical Action.”

Margaret Speirs, wife of Simon Speirs – a Practical Action supporter for more than 20 years.

Thank you

If you have decided to leave a gift to Practical Action in your Will, thank you so much. A legacy to Practical Action is a promise of a world that works better for everyone. Together we'll find powerful ways to create lasting, positive change in the future – whatever that future may hold.

Codicil

A Codicil is a simple legal document that allows you to make changes to your existing Will, such as adding a gift to Practical Action, without writing an entirely new Will. We suggest that you use this form to instruct your solicitor of this change. He /she will ensure that the wording and process is correct and the Codicil is legally valid.

Firstly, sign your name and date in the presence of two witnesses. Ask them to write their name, address and occupation, and then sign and date the Codicil. You must be present while each of you sign the Codicil.

When the Codicil is complete, make sure you keep it in a safe place and do not attach it to any other documents or use any pins, paperclips or staples. Send or give a copy of your Will and Codicil to your executor(s) and let them know where the originals are held. It is important that the original Will and Codicil are kept together (but not attached) and that anyone with a copy of your Will also has a copy of the Codicil.

If you have any questions about leaving a gift in your Will to Practical Action, please contact Liz Webb on 01926 634484 or email Liz.Webb@practicalaction.org.uk
